Chicago, Nov. [illegible] Mayor Roche [illegible]

We the undersigned, committee [illegible] of August Spies, A. R. Parsons, Adolph Fischer, George Engel and Louis Lingg, respectfully request that we be permitted to have a procession which we agree to conduct in accordance with your instructions. (Signed)

FRANZ A. STAUBER,
HENRY LINNEMEYER,
MAX OPPENHEIMER.

Mayor Roche then issued the following order:

[illegible] Now, [illegible] the committee [illegible] Permission is hereby given to the families and friends of August Spies, A. R. Parsons, Adolph Fischer, George Engel and Louis Lingg to conduct a funeral Sunday, November 13, between the hours of twelve and two o'clock p. m. on the following conditions: The bodies are to be taken from the respective homes [illegible] to the place of [illegible] forming a line on Milwaukee avenue to Desplaines street [illegible] to Lake street, Lake street to [illegible] avenue and Fifth avenue to the depot of the Wisconsin Central Railway company, Polk street. The carrying or displaying of banners is prohibited. No speeches are to be made and no [illegible] arms shall be carried in the procession, nor shall any demonstration of a public character be made except [illegible] The music, if any, shall be dirges only. This permit is issued subject to the statute laws of the state of Illinois [illegible] ordinances of the city of Chicago, and the procession will at all times be subject to police regulations. [Signed]

JOHN A. ROCHE,
Mayor.

"Accepted." FRANZ STAUBER,
HENRY LINNEMEYER,
MAX OPPENHEIMER.

The mayor hopes and presumes that this funeral will proceed quietly and orderly as all other funerals are accustomed to do. At the same time he says [illegible] and thorough preparations have been made for the quelling of any possible disturbance.

In [illegible] Hall, 54 West Lake street, the very building where the dynamite [illegible] was planned the night before the massacre at the Haymarket, a [illegible] was held by the Central Labor union [illegible] to make arrangements for attending the funeral of the five dead anarchists. It was resolved to call out members of every branch of the organization. If this is fully obeyed it would imply a procession [illegible] of nearly 15,000 men.

In Greif's saloon, below the hall where the meeting was held, a motley crowd was collected discussing the [illegible] of which [illegible] is the result. Portraits of the anarchists draped in mourning hung on the walls and many of those present wore crape on their arms. Great regret [illegible] the fact that nothing would be allowed [illegible]

In a darkened room below [illegible] she is comforting the sister and mother of Spies."

"Is she not [illegible] herself?"

"Indeed no," was the reply. "I [illegible] in my heart [illegible] Nina has not uttered one cry or [illegible]"

Captain Black will make an address at the funeral tomorrow. What [illegible] speaking is to be done will be done at the grave. [illegible] will be selected to drive people from [illegible]

Fatal Cancer.

Berlin, November 12.—(Copyright 1887 by the New York Associated Press.) The first whispers of dire news from San Remo were only [illegible] in Berlin till towards evening. On the bourse [illegible] congratulatory articles on the improving prospects of the crown prince [illegible] reports were [illegible] that yesterday evening's [illegible] were false news.

These reports created general consternation. Early [illegible] the malady had been [illegible] who went to San Remo at the [illegible] chances of recovery or the [illegible] of the patient. But the official admission was enough to confirm the worst fears in the public mind concerning the crown prince's fate.

Later it became known that Professor Bergmann had not lectured at the university, because he was engaged in consultation on the expediency of performing another operation, and that Doctors Schrötter and Tobold were in favor of [illegible] while Drs. [illegible] and Mackenzie were opposed to it. At last a [illegible] was made yesterday morning which [illegible] that a radical cure was impossible. The only difference of opinion was as to how long the crown prince's life could be prolonged.

The crown prince heard part of the discussion between the doctors. He showed the greatest self possession when told that his recovery was impossible [illegible] He afterwards [illegible] the doctors [illegible] placed himself in their hands. Dr. Mackenzie communicated the result of the examination to Prince William, who seemed [illegible] affected [illegible] his father.

H. W. STEELE,
Manager of the Gazette.

We print a copy of a special letter this morning with one from the distinguished explorer General Greely.

The casual reading of the San Juan Prospector shows that its esteemed contemporary paper and the Graphic are not on good terms.

The anarchists in London probably agree with Mr. Henry Watterson that Mr. Phelps, our minister to England, is very discourteous. He declined to meet the anarchists or have anything to do with sending their petition for the commutation of the sentence of the anarchists to Governor Oglesby.

The two candidates for judge in Cook county in Illinois, were Judge Gary, who presided over the court which convicted the anarchists, and Captain Black who was the counsel for the anarchists. The former received 56,658 votes, the latter 6,125 votes, thus giving Judge Gary a majority of over 50,000 votes. From the above vote, it is evident the people of Chicago are sound on the question of how the law should be administered to anarchists.

There is great danger of extreme and unwise legislation in the coming congress on account of the formation of the various trust companies. Just now these trust companies are a much greater threat than the anarchists. They have accomplished so much in the way of putting up prices that a very deep seated feeling in favor of retaliatory legislation has been aroused. Retaliatory legislation is almost always unwise, but if we do have any extreme legislation the capitalists who have organized the various trusts, have themselves alone to blame. The only thing to worry about is that such legislation is likely to injure the innocent.

—The New York Tribune's moral of the election in its city is: "The republicans are always weaker when the mugwumps vote with them." The Tribune occasionally has had the opportunity to make this remark. But if this is true it is a logical inference that the republicans are always stronger when the mugwumps vote the democratic ticket. If the Tribune should wish to illustrate this it will not select the campaign of 1882 when Cleveland was elected governor of New York by nearly 200,000 majority, nor the presidential campaign of 1884, nor the mayoralty contest of 1886 when Hewitt was elected mayor. The remark is not an encouraging one because the mugwumps vote independently of party for the best candidates and are most always right. It is also hardly a wise remark, because the election shows pretty clearly that the republicans will be in need next year of all the votes they can get.

The most common argument against our free government is that it is not strong enough to deal with cases of wide internal disorder, because the law makes it so difficult to have the aid of the military. But those who read the history of Chicago last Friday, are not likely to repeat this remark. That city had been the headquarters for anarchists and socialists. Their papers had been permitted to say what they chose without interference. Until a year ago last spring they were allowed to hold public meetings without interference in which the speakers were urging a revolution of force. The efforts to save the lives of these men had wrought the interest of the lower anarchists up to a fever heat. Yet, notwithstanding all this, the men are hanged and there was no outbreak. We venture to say that there is no great city in Europe where there are as many socialists as in Chicago that would have borne the strain so well. In fact, no city would have attempted the hanging with only the local police at hand. It would have had the presence of the soldiers of the national government to aid in keeping peace.

Henry George does not seem to be discouraged at his reduced vote in New York city. When the result was known on the election night he made the following hopeful speech to his friends: [illegible]

[illegible] Written for the Gazette.

[illegible] years since it was predicted that [illegible] Arctic work was [illegible] commission for explorations in [illegible] was a matter of the past [illegible] have not been verified [illegible] a plan of ideas about [illegible]. The attempt of Gilder [illegible] the record of lost [illegible] and those en route the [illegible] stores of Repulse bay [illegible] to Cone Land and thence to Cape [illegible] a degree of [illegible] which still linger [illegible] which misfortune and grief failed to [illegible] as a forlorn hope [illegible] Hudson bay [illegible] the winding grounds of [illegible] Strait.

gain the journey of Baron Von Toll and Dr. Bunge to the new Siberian [illegible] excited considerable attention and which was [illegible] of these explorers [illegible] Siberian isles.

Later Engineer Peary of the United States navy, visiting Greenland [illegible] formidable [illegible] traversing [illegible] of the inland ice bids fair [illegible] to traverse [illegible] that the island will soon be [illegible] from east to west.

[illegible] we had [illegible] some direct interest in Arctic explorations.

The expedition which Maury [illegible] to the world the safest and [illegible] route for sailing vessels [illegible] to organize that he might show [illegible] what American sailors could [illegible] in the Arctic seas, as now once more [illegible]. Maury found [illegible] neither money nor ships at home or [illegible], however, [illegible] so prominent a part in organizing [illegible] perfecting the series of scientific [illegible] polar observations from 1881 to [illegible], has again shown the world wide interest [illegible] by fostering Antarctic explorations. The 'German Geographical' society favors such work, and British Association for the Advancement of Science also investigated and [illegible] favorably upon the subject. The Royal Scottish Geographical society and [illegible] associations have united in urging [illegible] Antarctic work be not neglected [illegible] Australasian colonies [illegible] encouraged by the home government [illegible] would [illegible] an expedition which would [illegible] credit to England [illegible] colors.

[illegible] the [illegible] Greenland [illegible] discoveries of Holm and other Danish [illegible] have proved the soundness of the [illegible] advanced by me in "Three Years of Arctic Service" that the Eskimos [illegible] reached their present locality by passing overland from the west coast, either by means of intervening fiords or along the [illegible] which skirts the northern [illegible] and of desolation. Denmark promises [illegible] to enter this field, and it is [illegible] that a steam vessel under Hovgaard or Holm will try again the eastern Greenland seas, in which [illegible] Germans met [illegible] fate.

The expeditions which they have [illegible] been organized show the [illegible] and continued interest which [illegible] abide for greater or less extent [illegible] veil of mystery [illegible] the Arctic and Antarctic circles.

WILL THE NORTH POLE BE REACHED

In connection with these various [illegible] the writer is asked to express his opinion as to whether the north pole will ever be reached. It is not to be supposed [illegible] merely ipse dixit will be accepted on [illegible] uncertain question. Let [illegible] examine a little the various efforts which have been made to reach this geographical point. One of the expeditions [illegible] planned in its general arrangements [illegible] though it failed in details, particularly [illegible] was commanded by Sir Edward Parry in the famous attempt to reach the North pole by boats and sledges to the northward of Spitzbergen in the year 1827. Unfortunately for Parry, he found, instead of a solid [illegible] over which his party could travel [illegible] a fair degree of rapidity, a broken [illegible] drifting mass of ice [illegible] which was not sufficient in extent to justify sledge travel, nor, on the other hand, [illegible] sea sufficiently free from ice to [illegible] conveniently by boats. [illegible] the energies of this party were [illegible] wasted in repeated [illegible] efforts of [illegible] dragging their boats. Added [illegible] later the knowledge that [illegible] southerly drift carried [illegible] nearly as far to the south [illegible] their utmost endeavors enabled [illegible] to travel northward by day. Notwithstanding such adverse conditions, [illegible] succeeded in reaching latitude [illegible] within 435 miles of the geographical pole. Had Parry [illegible] master of [illegible] vessel [illegible] it is beyond question that by vessel [illegible] could have forced its way to the [illegible] far to the northward of [illegible] parallel. But such was [illegible] and later the world [illegible] accepted [illegible] the Arctic [illegible] advocated by Parry himself [illegible] no great success can be made by a vessel unless it forces its way in open water along the shore of a solid land which has a western exposure.

[illegible] the British expedition of 1875 and 1876 favored by the coast of Greenland, passed up the West Greenland channel and displayed the British flag on the polar pack, in latitude 83° 20' [illegible] 400 miles of the geographical pole. The heavy equipment of the English party, and the fact that the exhausting work of dragging the sledges fell entirely upon the [illegible] instead of [illegible] Eskimo dogs [illegible] has never been [illegible] of which Markham's party [illegible] the [illegible] expedition of Weyprecht [illegible] Payer leaving the Tegetthoff [illegible] north shore of the new land known as [illegible] Joseph land, succeeded in reaching by sledge Cape Fligely [illegible] parallel [illegible] with water [illegible] of the pole.

[illegible] EXPEDITIONS.

[illegible] Lieutenant Lockwood [illegible] Brainard and Christiansen [illegible] the northern [illegible] of Greenland [illegible] ever [illegible] looked northward [illegible] which yet [illegible] Cape Washington [illegible] and within 396 miles of the geographical pole.

It follows then that [illegible] the eighty-third parallel has been reached [illegible] within [illegible] of the geographical pole at two widely separated points of the Arctic circle and the question [illegible] whether it is very possible for the [illegible] mere space to be passed over by [illegible] reached the parties well equipped [illegible] and a sufficient number of supporting [illegible] furnished. If the difficulties of food and travel were [illegible] the answer would be yes, for although my own party did not [illegible] attributed to a great extent to the fact that the Lady Franklin Bay expedition was planned and organized in the interest of [illegible] observations and not for the purpose of geographical exploration, which latter [illegible]. Had the expedition been properly fitted out for exploration alone [illegible] money and time been available for [illegible] to select his sledging party [illegible] his dogs and make arrangements [illegible] traveling devices known to Arctic sledgemen in the interest of [illegible] exploring work the writer doubts not that Lieutenant Lockwood and his hardy companions instead of stopping at 83 24' would have passed to the northward until the eighty-fifth parallel had been crossed on the coast of Greenland [illegible] parallel it would still be a question of [illegible] determined men and a favorable season, such as favored Lockwood in 1882, for a storm in 1883 turned his party backward when starting under more favorable circumstances than in the previous year. But even despite the open sea at Black Horn Cliffs the eighty-fifth parallel would have undoubtedly been reached by the [illegible] expedition of 1881 had its work been strictly geographical, for in such case the commander with a dozen men would have landed [illegible] not on Grinnell Land, but on the Greenland coast near Thank God Harbor, whence it would have been possible during the fall of 1881 and the early spring [illegible] either Cape Bryant or Cape May or still further to the northward on Cape Britannia Land. Such conditions would have insured a party reaching [illegible] pole without any [illegible] difficulty [illegible] and failed [illegible] the eighty-fifth. Under favorable conditions [illegible] possibly [illegible] the party could have attained the pole itself provided that the spot where latitude attains its maximum and longitude ceases to exist is situated on [illegible] frozen sea [illegible]. These conditions, however, are by no means certain, and in the opinion of the writer are [illegible].

AERIAL NAVIGATION NECESSARY.

It will never be the fortune of man to place foot upon the north geographical pole. This opinion is not based upon a mere surmise, but rather on scientific grounds resting on deductions drawn from the prevalence of icebergs near the pole and the character of the ice in the sea to the northward of Grinnell Land.

It is a matter of little doubt that the south polar regions contain a land of vast extent from which slowly increasing layers of falling snow gradually send forth from its central plateaus the enormous flat top icebergs of the south. The manner in which southern ice forms has been clearly set forth by the late Dr. Carpenter in an article entitled "The Deep Sea and Its Contents," which was published in a magazine some years since, in the Nineteenth Century I believe.

The result of observations in the Arctic sea led me to believe that the so called paleocrystic ice of Nares was nothing but the flat topped icebergs of the north, an opinion which was confirmed almost to a certainty when in Kane's sea while making the famous boat journey to Sabine. I found on an enormous flat topped iceberg of the [illegible] paleocrystic sea a couple of [illegible] moraines formed of large rocks dragged down by the moving glacier from the adjacent cliffs in such manner as any traveller can now see in the Alps. This proves conclusively that this ice of an [illegible] and of a thousand feet or [illegible] in thickness, which the southerly running current of Kane sea shows must come from the north, is simply a detachment from the ice cap of a considerable land which must be in the vicinity of the North Pole, since ice of this character fills the frozen sea to the northward of Grinnell Land. The land from which ice of such an enormous extent must flow can only be one of very considerable extent, and the fact that the lines of stratification in these icebergs are invariably parallel and regular shows conclusively that the land is practically level. If then we have reason to suppose that the North Pole is simply an ice capped land it is certain that the foot of man can never press it. If it is not ice capped, then it is within the range of possibility or probability that the next century will see the outlines of that unknown region clearly defined upon the maps of the world.

It only needs the same degree of advance until the end of 1950 that has been made from 1800 to the present day, to insure the desired result, but which, if [illegible] aerial navigation [illegible]. Then the enormous [illegible] whether [illegible] at the North [illegible] point at which [illegible] could easily have been [illegible] some neighboring [illegible] know that at some [illegible] progress northward along [illegible] of long [illegible] certain plants [illegible] toward the pole.

The discovery [illegible] fossils of plants and animals [illegible] how great a temperature [illegible] tropical existed in parts of the world [illegible] which [illegible] as being in [illegible] accordance [illegible] theories.

The Woman's Exchange.

[illegible] world of [illegible] Cook's [illegible]. The Woman's Exchange [illegible] to all women who wish to help themselves. [illegible] charity. [illegible] capital is just what working women [illegible] possess. But [illegible] conducted on good business principles the Woman's Exchange will soon become self supporting and very possibly more than self supporting.

It is hoped that all women who wish to turn their [illegible] a part of it will [illegible] to the exchange at once. Let them tell us what they can do and [illegible] will soon be found for their work. Cake bakers are particularly needed. The call for home baked bread is great. There is already a demand for [illegible]. The officers of the board will be glad to see any women who wishes to avail herself of the opportunity offered by the exchange and to arrange for becoming a member. Ready made garments for children are in demand and really there is almost no limit to the number of useful articles of [illegible] own homes which can be sold.

The rooms of the exchange will be opened very soon. They are commodious and pleasant. Lunches will be served at a moderate price and at any hour of the day. Every [illegible] subscribing one dollar becomes a member of the association and entitled to a vote at its meetings. The management is in the hands of a board of [illegible] consisting of the officers of the association and a managing committee of five. This board is at present composed of the following ladies:

Mrs. J. A. Sabine, president.
Miss Jessie Aiken, secretary.
Mrs. E. A. Gill, treasurer.
Mrs. S. E. Solly, Mrs. A. E. Newton, Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. Dickey, managing committee.

The following rules have been adopted by the association:

RULES OF THE WOMAN'S EXCHANGE.

1. [illegible] subscribe to the funds of the Exchange for the current year.
2. Each subscriber of one dollar may enter the work of one person for one year.
3. Our commission is ten per cent on the price received.
4. All work is received subject to the approval of the managers. Needlework must be of the best quality to meet with ready sale. It is advisable to send samples before entering work.
5. Wax and feather flowers, hair and feather work, spatter and splinter work and cardboard will not be accepted.
6. Articles will not be registered until express and mail charges have been paid on them.
7. Consignors must put the price upon the articles they send, these prices being subject to revision by a competent committee. The consignor must also put a minimum price upon any article, which in every case will be respected by the [illegible] give name, address and list of articles sent.
8. Consignors living at distance are paid by check or postal order. All payments made Wednesday from 3 to 5 o'clock.
9. Articles unsold at the end of six months must be returned at the owner's expense. The exchange does not hold itself responsible for them if allowed to remain for a longer period.
10. No consignments received after 5 o'clock, and [illegible] after 1 o'clock.
11. All letters containing information about articles sent to the exchange should be addressed to the exchange, with stamp for reply.
12. The exchange does not hold itself responsible for losses, having taken all reasonable precautions against fire and theft.
13. Consignors desiring articles returned by mail must take all risks.
14. In the cake and preserve department there is a standard and none can enter cake or preserves without first sending samples of their work.
15. Goods not received in good condition will be returned at the owner's expense.

We need furniture for our rooms and if there are any persons who will make us any donations of such, we shall receive them very thankfully. We particularly need table furniture of all kinds. Cups and saucers, plates and dishes, knives and forks, glassware, table linen, chairs, tables, kitchen utensils and a stove. The rooms will soon be ready for the reception of these articles and if those who wish to give us any of the needed furniture will confer with Mrs. Solly, Mrs. Newton or Mrs. Sabine, arrangements will be made at once for receiving them. The scope and possibilities of a Woman's Exchange are boundless. There seems no limit to the ways in which deserving women can be benefited by this organization. We feel confident that those who come forward now and by a little timely aid enable us to begin the enterprise will never regret having done so.

The Marquis of Waterford in Bishop's Lawn and Cabby.

One night he was driven home in a cab to his uncle's, the Bishop of Armagh's house, in Charles street, St. James square, which, during the absence of that dignitary he was occupying, but, although he told the hall porter to give the cabman half a sovereign for little over an hour's work, the Jehu was very abusive. The marquis, who had retired into a room of the hall, heard every word that passed. Hanging in a closet was the bishop's House of Lords costume, and inspired by the demon of mischief, in a twinkling he had donned the wig, lawn sleeves, [illegible] into the streets where the driver was still indulging in the choicest expressions at his command. "Hullo, you sir," he cried, "is that the language to make use of in the hearing of a bishop? If you are not off [illegible], you profane scoundrel, I'll give you the rites of the church with my clerical knuckles." Now, cabby, so far from being awed by this threat, jumped off his box and throwing off his coat, declared his utter contempt for the whole bench of bishops and his readiness to fight them all, one after another. Making sure of an easy victory he rushed at [illegible] but was stopped by a blow that sent him sprawling. After two or three repetitions of this argument he was fain to take to his heels, the marquis pursuing him, his gown and wig flying in the night air, and bawling "Won't you stay for your extra fare?" "You may be a bishop," said the fellow ruefully, as he mounted his box, "but you hit like the devil."

Ristori's Memoirs.

Paris dispatch to the London Standard.

The memoirs and studies of the celebrated Italian tragedienne Adelaide Ristori, were published to-day. They will certainly greatly interest every lover of the stage. The authoress relates that she made her debut on the boards when she was only three months old, in a comedy entitled "New Year's Gifts." She was packed in a hamper, and was supposed to have been sent to a rich land owner, in the hope that he would make her his adopted child, as in Dickens' well known work. From that time forward till she grew up she was utilized on the stage every time a child was wanted by her parents, who were comedians, but the most interesting portion of her memoirs is that which begins with her visit to Paris in 1855, when at the Salle Ventadour, she was the rival of Rachel at the Comedie Francaise. Adelaide Ristori's studies, of the character of Mary Stuart, Lady Macbeth and Elizabeth, and the [illegible]
